

THE SANDY HOOK COVER-UP (Transcript)

Hi, my name is Brendan Hunt. I am making this video to piece together the conflicting reports about what happened at the Sandy Hook Elementary school shooting on December 14, 2012. The differing accounts and inconsistencies in the media, combined with other odd coincidences, have led some to believe that the alleged shooter, Adam Lanza, was a patsy, and that several of the "lone gunman" mass shootings of 2012 were in fact carried out by teams, or multiple shooters, who may or may not be part of a covert element of the government like the CIA. Based on the claims of MULTIPLE SHOOTERS, speculation has proposed that some of these events could be an organized attack against the second amendment (which gives Americans the right to bear arms). This theory stems from the belief that elements of the federal government want to disarm the populace.

These possible theories are only gaining more traction because mainstream media outlets have begun "scrubbing" articles from the web which do not line up with the official narrative. I think by examining the differing accounts of what happened we may be able to make an informed opinion. A lot of the information in the media comes from unnamed "officials" so sometimes it is difficult to discover the truth. If you would like to check my sources for this information, please see the blog posts I wrote during December 2012 on my website brendanhunt.com - they contain many of the links, pictures, and videos I will use in this presentation.

THE OFFICIAL NARRATIVE

"Officials" now say that early on Friday, December 14, 2012, Adam Lanza (20) shot his mother four times in the face at the house where they lived. Other sources say two times. This was apparently done with a Marlin rifle which was left at the Lanza's Newtown house. Officials reported that Adam took "three guns that belonged to her" and "drove to the school in her car with four guns, including a shotgun that was left in the back of the vehicle." He was also wearing a bulletproof vest.

Sandy Hook Elementary, in Newtown CT, had a security protocol that called for doors to be locked during the day and visitors to be checked on a video monitor inside. "You had to buzz in and out and the whole nine yards," said a former chairwoman of the Newtown board of education, Lillian Bittman. "When you buzz, you come up on our screen." The lock system did not go into effect until 9:30 each morning. The New York Times originally reported that the principal recognized Mr. Lanza because his mother worked at the school, let him in on Friday, and that sometime later she heard shots and went to see what was going on. The UK Times says Adam Lanza shot his way into Sandy Hook Elementary School. "He was not voluntarily let into the school at all," said Lieutenant J. Paul Vance of the Connecticut State Police: "He forced his way in."

Evidence has emerged that the shooting began in the office of school principal Dawn Hochsprung while the school intercom was on. It's not clear whether it was turned on to alert the school or whether it was on for morning announcements, but the principal's screams and the cries of children heard throughout the school gave teachers time to take precautions to protect their children. The Newtown school superintendent, Janet Robinson, said the principal and the school psychologist were shot and killed as they tried to tackle the gunman, and that a few of the teachers helped their children escape or hide. Robinson ran through the halls, warning of a gunman on the loose, and someone switched on the intercom, alerting people in the building to the attack — and perhaps saving many lives — by letting them hear the hysteria going on in the school office, a teacher said. According to the New York Times, Lanza "blasted his way into the elementary school and then sprayed the children with bullets." I think this kind of "reporting" is extremely callous, and is a good example of the sensationalist journalism which is peddled on many mainstream news outlets.

Lt. Vance said the shooting took place in two nearby classrooms at Sandy Hook Elementary School, which has students in kindergarten to Grade 4, in the community of 27,000 northeast of New York City. Maryann Jacob, a library clerk, said she initially herded students behind a bookcase against a wall "where they can't be seen." She said that spot had been chosen in school practice drills, but on Friday, she had to move the pupils to a storage room "because we discovered one of our doors didn't lock." Ms. Jacob said the storage room had crayons and paper that they tore up for the children to color while they waited. "They were asking what was going on," she said. "We said: 'We don't know. Our job is just to be quiet.'" But she said that she did know, because she had called the school office and learned the school was under siege.

Robert Licata said his six-year-old son was in class when the gunman burst in and shot the teacher. "That's when my son grabbed a bunch of his friends and ran out the door," he said. "He was very brave. He waited for his friends." He said the shooter didn't say a word. Stephen Delgiadice said his eight-year-old daughter heard two big bangs and teachers told her to get in a corner. His daughter was fine. "It's alarming, especially in Newtown, Conn., which we always thought was the safest place in America," he said. Danbury Hospital was the only hospital to take in victims from the shootings, admitting three patients. Doctors said at a news conference they cleared four trauma rooms to treat shooting victims. Richard Wilford's seven-year-old son, Richie, is in the second grade at the school. His son told him that he heard a noise that "sounded like what he described as cans falling." The boy told him a teacher went out to check on the noise, came back in, locked the door and had the kids huddle up in the corner until police arrived. First-grade teacher Kaitlin Roig, 29, locked her 14 students in a class bathroom and listened to "tons of shooting" until police came to help.

In the end, twenty young students and six staff members were reported dead. Adam Lanza is then said to have turned the gun on himself. MergimBajraliu, 17, said he heard the gunshots echo from his home and raced to check on his nine-year-old sister at the school. He said his sister, who was fine, heard a scream come over the intercom at one point. He said teachers were shaking and crying as they came out of the building. "Everyone was just traumatized," he said. Melissa Makris, 43, said her 10-year-old son, Philip, was in the school gym. "He said he heard a lot of loud noises and then screaming. Then the gym teachers immediately gathered the children in a corner and kept them safe in a corner," Makris said. The fourth-grader told his mother that the students stayed huddled until police came in the gym. He also told her that he saw what looked like a body under a blanket as he fled the school. "He said the policeman came in and helped them get out of the building and told them to run," Makris said. "And they ran to the firehouse."

Dorothy Werden lives across the street from Christopher and Lynn McDonnell, who lost their daughter Grace in the rampage. Ms. Werden remembered seeing Grace get on a bus Friday, as she did every morning at 8:45. Shortly afterward, she received a call that there had been a lockdown at the school — something that happens periodically, she said, because there is a prison nearby. It was only when she saw police cars from out of town speed past her that she knew something was seriously wrong. State Police received the first 911 call at 9:41 a.m. and immediately began sending emergency units from the western part of the state.

It was silent in the school when police officers rushed in with their guns drawn. Multiple 30-round magazines and hundreds of bullets were found at the scene. CNN reported body was found in a classroom. Connecticut Gov. Dannel Malloy said Lanza committed suicide when he heard first responders coming. "We surmise that it was during the second classroom episode that he heard responders coming and apparently at that, decided to take his own life," Malloy said. FOX reported that Lanza killed himself with a single bullet to the head from the 10 mm gun, and that the bullet was recovered in a classroom wall. This information came from an unnamed CT official.

Also among the dead were teachers Rachel Davino, Anne Marie Murphy, Victoria Soto. and Lauren Rousseau, who had recently started as a full-time substitute. "It was the best year of her life," The News-Times quoted her mother, Teresa, a copy editor at the newspaper, as saying. Ms. Soto reportedly shooed her first graders into closets and cabinets when she heard the first shots, and then, by some accounts, told the gunman the kids were in the gym. Her cousin, James Willsie, told ABC News that she had "put herself between the gunman and the kids... [and] lost her life protecting those little ones."

On Friday afternoon, family members were led away from the firehouse near the school, some of them weeping. A man in a T-shirt put his arms around a woman as they walked down the middle of the street, oblivious to everything around them. Another woman with tears rolling down her face walked by carrying a car seat with a young infant inside and a bag that appeared to have toys and stuffed animals. The bodies of those killed were still in the school as of 10 p.m. December 14.

Identification belonging to Ryan Lanza was found at the shooting scene, federal sources told ABC News. Law enforcement officials also told NBC News that the gunman was Adam Lanza's brother, Ryan, and they had sent out a bulletin to local and federal law enforcement agencies to that effect.

When authorities went to Ryan's home in Hoboken, N.J., to search it, they unexpectedly found him there. The brother was later brought in for questioning, but a law enforcement official said he was not believed to have had a role in the incident. Investigators were searching his computers and phone records, but Ryan Lanza told law enforcement he had not been in touch with his brother since about 2010. Ryan said it was possible that Adam had his ID, and that his brother Adam had a history of mental problems, but the nature of them was not clear. At least one law enforcement official has said Adam had been diagnosed with Asperger's, a mild form of autism often characterized by social awkwardness. People with the disorder are often highly intelligent. While they can become frustrated more easily, there is no evidence of a link between Asperger's and violent behavior, experts say.

Officials said that Lanza shot "from a distance and then at close range, hitting some of [the children] as many as 11 times, as he fired a semiautomatic rifle loaded with ammunition designed for maximum damage." At a briefing in Newtown, the state's chief medical examiner, H. Wayne Carver II, said "This is a very devastating set of injuries" and that the victims had been struck "all over, all over," When asked if they had suffered he said, "Not for very long."

Carver went on to say that the bullets were "designed in such a fashion the energy is deposited in the tissue so the bullet stays in," resulting in deep damage. As to how many bullets Mr. Lanza had fired, Dr. Carver said "There were lots of them." He said that parents had identified their children from photographs to spare them from seeing the bodies. He said that 4 doctors and 10 technicians had done the autopsies and that he had personally performed seven, all on first-graders. "This is probably the worst I have seen or the worst that I know of any of my colleagues having seen," said Dr. Carver, who is 60 and has been Connecticut's chief medical examiner since 1989. He said that only Mr. Lanza and his mother Nancy Lanza remained to be autopsied the following day.

As the town mourned the deaths Sunday, a church service was temporarily evacuated after a caller "threatened to kill people in the church," a spokesman said. School officials have said there are no immediate plans to reopen Sandy Hook Elementary. Connecticut State Police announced Monday they will be holding all crimes scenes connected to the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting for the foreseeable future, while they investigate the horrific mass murder. "[We have] seized the crime scenes under search warrant [and are] holding on to them indefinitely," Connecticut State Police spokesman Lt. J. Paul Vance told reporters at a mid-morning news briefing. Vance said it could take months for investigators to complete their examination of the crime scene at the school. Keep in mind this is the same Lt. J. Paul Vance who said that all relevant information relating to this case is coming strictly from the local, state, and federal authorities, and that independent journalists and bloggers publishing "disinformation" on social media sites may be prosecuted under federal law.

EVIDENCE OF AN ACCOMPLICE/MULTIPLE SHOOTERS

Evidence strongly suggests at least two additional Sandy Hook shooting suspects were apprehended by police in the minutes following 9:35AM, when officers were dispatched to the elementary school. Recordings of the 911 dispatcher and first responders to the campus all but wholly corroborate initial reports of at least TWO persons attempting to flee from the scene, with audio evidence of law enforcement officers actually encountering the suspected assailants at around 9:40AM. The live emergency services audio feed on the scene reveals some interesting observations from first responders that have been completely overlooked by the mainstream media.

When the police got there, gunfire is reported as still being heard, even though the shooting was supposed to have ended by that time.

(clip)

The next report says that the shooting has stopped and the school is “in lockdown”.

(clip)

The police relay a teacher’s report that she saw “two shadows running past the gym”.

(clip)

This is followed by another officer on the scene who says, “Yeh, we got ‘em, they’re coming at me! ... [inaudible] ... coming up the driveway real slowly!”

(clip)

That same officer says he has him or them “pronked out”, which presumably means he has apprehended someone and they are laid out on the ground, before another officer comes on to say, “be aware that we do have a second [inaudible] ...” This “pronked” man is said to be Chris Manfredonia, an alleged parent of one of the surviving children, who was at the school to make gingerbread houses, and who ran around the building looking for a way in once he sensed the danger. A student reports seeing a man lying on the ground in handcuffs near the school, probably Chris Manfredonia.

(hear recording and video of kid)

Coincidentally, Manfredonia lives just 400 feet from the alleged shooter’s house

(screenshot)

Police also ran into the back woods. Here is video footage of this occurring:

(show video)

Later on, an officer who sounds out of breath, like he’s just given chase, reports what I think sounds like “these guys” followed certainly by “multiple weapons, including long rifles and shotgun”. If these were found so early on, why were they not included in the initial press reports which stated that three firearms had been found – the above mentioned Glock, Sig Sauer and Bushmaster AR-15 rifle?

(audio)

John Miller of CBS News tweeted at 10-21am that morning "officials have a potential second shooter in custody in elementary school shooting."

(Show screenshot)

Several eye witnesses saw a man in dark camouflage being taken out of the woods nearby, in handcuffs. This "Camo Pants Man" was led past the parents and said "I didn't do it." Then he was put into the front of a police car. This man has not been identified.

(Show footage)

A local CBS affiliate was also reporting the existence of a second gunman and said "Police believe there may be a second gunman and are looking for a red or maroon van with its back window blown out..."

(Show screenshot)

According to ABC News, "authorities initially believed that there were two gunmen and were searching cars around the school, but authorities did not appear to be looking for another gunman" any longer.

Here are a few other screenshots of news articles concerning a second shooter, before they were "scrubbed" or removed:

Such information was carefully expurgated from the official narrative, presented by corporate media, within hours of the event, a storyline Americans are now painfully familiar with. Currently, the 20 year-old Adam Lanza is depicted front and center as the chief culprit of the killing spree. Predictably, there is not the slightest reference of additional suspects.

Now I'd like to introduce a piece of evidence which might sound pretty odd at first. I was very skeptical when I heard it. I investigated the matter, and it checked out as legit, so now I'm passing it on to you: A caller on the Alex Jones Show gave a report from Newtown of an unverified rumor circulating amongst school staff that the shooters were described to be disguised as an "organized group of nuns" which infiltrated the school property to carry out the shootings. Sounds crazy, right? Well get this: evidence has come forth that CORROBORATES these claims in the shocking audio capture of Newtown Police operations. Take a listen for yourself. At 1:34:19 it says, "Two occupants with possible ski masks". and at 1:35:07, "One may be wearing a nun outfit, headed toward Danbury and Stoney Hill, purple van". At the very least, police officers on the day of the shooting believed that there were multiple suspects fleeing the scene in a purple van wearing ski masks and, possibly, nun outfits.

There is also a matter of bullet holes being found in a car in the Sandy Hook parking lot. The car happened to belong to one of the teachers who was killed that morning. The media says these holes were made by bullets from inside the school. You can see a close up of them in this video:

(show video)

Here is a photo of the parking lot where one can easily pick out this teacher's distinctive car in the second row, next to the white SUV. Is it possible for a bullet to have damaged the car in this way, given the trajectory it would have to take? I find it more likely that this exchange of gunfire happened outside the school, perhaps when police stated that the suspects were running right towards them (followed by several shots)!

CHRISTOPHER RODIA

In the police audio, at 25min36sec, someone reads the license plate "722-ZHA"

At about 27min35sec, someone says "Connecticut trailer V87-278

At about 30min15sec, someone says "872-YEO possible suspect vehicle"

At about 30min40sec, someone says "Rodia: operator he's..{static}..as well. Name is Rodia, R-O-D-I-A, Christopher A. ...{static}..August 6th, '69"

I think the name Christopher Rodia is very likely to have been given as a response to the "872-YEO possible suspect vehicle." It came about 20 seconds after that license plate was read on the air, and it seems clear that they are referring to a possible suspect.

Rodia was in town for a court appearance due to the 7 felony charges he was facing. His entire family, in fact, is involved in criminal activity such as narcotics trafficking and theft. By doing some research on Facebook, I found Rodia is only one person removed from knowing Adam Lanza's family (Lanza being the accused shooter). I will now present the evidence which has led me to believe that the "Camo Pants Man" is actually Christopher A Rodia, and that he was involved in the shooting somehow.

I used Startpage to search for his name and found an article about Christopher Rodia (Newtown, CT, born 1969) from February 2012, about him stealing copper together with his 19 year old niece Cassandre Scire.

Now check this picture out. It's the car presented to us as Adam Lanza's. But READ THE LICENSE PLATE!!

(show pic)

The shooter has the same plate as Christopher A. Rodia! "872 YEO" The caption under the picture on the Yahoo News site read: "Dec. 16, 2012: The car driven by Connecticut school shooter Adam Lanza is towed from Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Connecticut." This car matches the appearance of the one which had the shotgun in its trunk, in the aerial news footage shot. I can't be sure if it's the same one though because I can't see the other license plate to compare. Here are two screenshots of the house where Rodia is said to be residing. You can see there is a dark car in the driveway which would certainly match the Rodia's black Honda found at the scene, but it's not possible to zoom in any further.

(screenshots)

Here is some more info on Chris Rodia from 19 Volmmer Ave. in Norwalk, CT:

He is a 42-year-old currently residing in Miami, FL. He has quite a list of previous drug and burglary charges. He seems to be big on stealing leaf blowers since he is currently awaiting trial for at least his 5th count of stealing a leaf blower. He had an active arrest warrant on October 8th. One of the more recent times he has been in the news was for stealing the copper wire from a construction site with his 19 year old niece. The 2 lived together on Volmmer Ave with a large group of extended family. Family members confirmed the relationship in comments on this news article. There was much talk of her being a "crack babie" and being mentally handicapped. A family member's comment claimed "Rodia 'tricked' her into being part of the theft" and "had told her they were just going to walgreens". Another family member claimed Rodia to be a "manipulator" and called him a "bum". Rodia was also found to be in possession of a large unmarked bag of Oxycontin at the time.

So it appears that Chris Rodia, a career petty thief who can't seem to stay out of jail and is stealing copper wire to support a drug habit (oxycodone), currently living in Florida, probably on the run from CT warrants, has a brand new looking Honda Civic registered to him in Connecticut that is being used by Nancy Lanza. This guy has a history of taking advantage of mentally challenged children and "manipulating them to do crimes." See where I'm going with this?

Another person registered to the 19 Volmmer Ave address is George Uzar, Jr (also registered to 24 Granite Dr. in Norwalk, CT). He seems to be a complete nut case if you can find his Twitter account and is constantly in and out of jail. He has a website that sells Nazi Flags and Weapon accessories called CrazyWhiteBoyStuff. He also owns 2 porn sites linked to the Volmmer website according to whois results: exoticfantasies.xxx and dvdsandporn.com – very classy. He was referred to as Cassandra's brother in comments on the news site. The first article I read was about him getting robbed and chasing the robbers down in his car and ramming them. The police investigated him and found him to be in possession of marijuana and mushrooms. See article here and also this one.

Uzar's parents, Allison and George UzarSr, shared the Granite Drive address with him. Allison is a Pharmaceutical Analyst for the company Perdue Pharma, a pain medication manufacturer that produces Oxycontin among other prescriptions. George Uzar Sr., who is extended family of Chris Rodia, is currently serving a long prison term for manufacturing automatic assault rifles. The mayor quoted "Scary' Amount of Firearms Found in Raid on Norwalker's House". He was manufacturing fully automatic rifles and selling them to members of the Latin Kings. Apparently he snitched because he was arrested then a few days later the whole rest of the organization went down. Over a hundred guns were found in their house. His son George Jr. was also arrested when the house was raided because of marijuana and a stashed .38 pistol. See link 1 and link 2 and link 3 for confirmation.

Chris Rodia has a construction contractor (carpentry and roofing) brother Dennis who just recently died, and whose mother's name is Lilli Rodia. "Survivors in addition to his mother (Lilli) include a long-time friend ,Donnella Bryan; a step-mother, Diane Rodia of Norwalk; two sisters and their husbands, Michele & Todd Turner of Norwalk and Mary & Matthew Pisani of North Haven; a brother Chris Rodia of Norwalk." Notice that his brother was a roofer and the crime Chris Rodia was charged with was stealing copper roofing off of a construction site. "A Norwalk man and woman were caught in the act Saturday night of stealing copper gutters from a house under construction on Stony Brook Road, police said."

Dennis and his mother have a long history of narcotics trafficking in the area. In fact, Dennis was arrested with heroin and cash back in Feb and then he and the mother were arrested in March for trafficking drugs, not a month later! "According to police, when the officer approached the car he noticed a six-pack of unopened beer, and large sums of money scattered on the back seat. Upon further inspection, police say, there was also a roll of money on the center console of the car and Rodia was leaning over, seemingly, in an attempt to hide something. The amount of cash discovered in the vehicle was not given. Police say, the car was searched and both men were arrested after finding two silver cans containing a total of 40 bags of heroine, 21 Oxycodone pills, 40 pills derivative of Oxycodone in a prescription bottle in neither person's name, and drug paraphernalia." Norwalk Patch Feb. 17th

"Dennis Rodia, 44, and his mother Lilli Rodia, 67, of 1 Gregory Blvd., Norwalk, were charged with possession of narcotics, possession of narcotics with intent to sell, illegal possession of narcotics within 1,500 feet of a school and possession of narcotics with intent to sell within 1,500 feet of a school. The two are being held in lieu of $100,000 bond. If they are not released will be arraigned at state Superior Court in Norwalk Thursday." The Stamford Advocate

So, one has to ask, how did a career criminal facing 7 felonies get to walk out of court with a "promise to appear"? How did Dennis get back on the streets of Norwalk in less than a month after being busted with 41 bags of smack and all kinds of Oxycontin? How is this guy's car, found at the scene of the Sandy Hook shooting, supposedly with a shotgun or rifle in it, not mentioned by the local cops or the media at large? Could this Chris Rodia be the "Camo Pants Man" found by police hiding in the woods? Could he have screwed up his killing spree, staying too long, with police cars surrounding his escape vehicle?

There are a lot of questions to be answered, but as we have seen before, Lt. Vance doesn't appear to be the one to ask. In this video, Lt. Vance is asked a question about whether or not Adam Lanza's mother actually worked at the school and he inexplicably starts to answer a question about the guy they may or may not have arrested in the woods behind the school. Does it sound like Lt. Vance is running on a tight script?

I am starting to think that Chris Rodia, who is facing serious time in jail, could have been hired to do this professional killing, and to blame it on the patsy Adam Lanza. And guess what? it turns out the Rodias and the Lanzas are connected!! These are the facebook links I took to make the connections. From Cassandra Scire ->PhylisByington (Rodia's Cousin) -> Christopher Rodia -> Ty ScireSkarupa -> Barbara Lanza-Coppola -> Rest of Lanza family..

Cassandra is the niece who was caught stealing copper with Rodia. As you can see, there is only one degree of separation between Rodia and the Lanza family. So it is very possible that he knew of Nancy Lanza and her son, Adam, the alleged shooter. There are probably more connections between them through other family lines but it was hard to find them without tons of time spent researching.

On January 3, 2013, the Connecticut Post responded to the Chris Rodia story with this revealing article, full of misleading statements:

In the dark and shadowy world of Internet bloggers and conspiracy theorists, Christopher Rodia is a mystery man connected to last month's school shooting in Newtown. But police say that's just not true. Still, that hasn't stopped the postings and hasn't stopped Rodia from receiving death threats. Sites like USAHitman, "a conspiracy and alternative news site," say the black Honda confiscated at the scene of the Dec. 14 mass murders belonged to Rodia, based on a policeman's call to dispatch on an audiotape posted by Radioman911TV. On that tape, Rodia's name can be heard shortly after a police officer calls in the license plate, 872-YEO, as the "possible suspect vehicle."

But while Rodia admits to run-ins with the law, including several pending larceny, forgery and narcotics cases, he says he wasn't anywhere near the school on the day of the shootings that left 26 dead, including 20 first-graders. "That was such a heinous crime, I don't want to be connected to it in any way," Rodia said. He says he was miles away in Greenwich, getting a warning for illegally parking in a fire zone. "I was with my niece driving my mother's sage green Nissan," the 43-year-old Norwalk resident said. Greenwich Detective Vincent O'Banner remembers pulling Rodia over in that city around the time of the Newtown shootings. "I do remember that," he said. "I gave him a verbal warning."

While the school shooting is still an active case, State Police spokesman Lt. J. Paul Vance said there was only one shooter: Adam Lanza, 20, who took his own life at the scene. "We aren't looking for anybody else -- for any other person," Vance said Wednesday, adding he has never heard of Rodia. The car confiscated at the scene, the black Honda with that license plate, belongs to a relative of Lanza's and not to Rodia, he said. But that's hasn't eased Rodia's fears, the result of numerous death threats he has received due to the Internet postings. "A guy in one of the calls starts swearing at me, then says he'll kill me and burn down my house while I'm sleeping," he said.

"I'm a big boy and can take care of myself," he said, but added his 72-year-old mother, Diane, is afraid to have her young grandchildren come to visit because of the threats. "We shouldn't have to be worrying about this," his mother said. Norwalk police have been called, Rodia said. "We were there on Dec. 27 about a posting on YouTube," said Norwalk Police Lt. Praveen John. A complaint was filed, but it didn't include concerns about any threats, he said, adding that particular post has been taken down.

Other postings, including those by USAHitman, and others like Godlike Productions, a site for conspiracy theorists as well as those interested in UFOs and the lunatic fringe, remain on the Internet. The headline on one USAHitman posting reads: "Adam Lanza's car registered to Christopher Rodia: The conspiracy begins." That site is run by Jim, a New Jersey resident who declined to give his last name. He calls himself a blogger and said posting stories like the one about Rodia is his "hobby." He said he didn't verify the information he reposts from other sites to see if it's accurate. "I have a full-time job and don't have time to research the stories," he said. "I like to post things I find interesting. I update the stories when more stuff comes out."

"That's the problem," said Norwalk police Lt. John. "Some things are posted, but not verified." However, "Spitfire list," a website of blogs by anti-fascist researcher and radio personality Dave Emory, has updated its information concerning Rodia, saying he "appears to be innocent and only coincidentally caught up in this event" and not driving the "possible suspect vehicle" mentioned on the tape.

"This is a reminder of why we must maintain the stance of really believing these individuals that get swept up in the post-tragedy aftermath are innocent until proven guilty, especially early on when minimal info is available," according to a posting on that site. "The guy (Rodia) didn't deserve this so if you meet him, buy him a beer (assuming you're 21+)."

As for Rodia's pending criminal cases, he said they're related to a problem he had with pain killers, the result of taking medication for an injury he sustained about a year ago. He said he's been in drug counseling and has been "clean since July."

First of all, take a look at the language that the CTPost uses to describe people searching for answers: "In the dark and shadowy world of internet bloggers" – using a site named "USAHitman" as the poster child for "conspiracy and alternative news" sites – the whole "death threats" thing –

"Rodia admits to run-ins with the law" – really? Seven felony cases described as "run-ins with the law"?

"I was with my niece driving my mother's sage green Nissan" – is this the same "crack babbie" niece that he was caught stealing copper with?

"He says he was miles away in Greenwich, getting a warning for illegally parking in a fire zone..." [and] Greenwich Detective Vincent O'Banner remembers pulling Rodia over in that city around the time of the Newtown shootings. "I do remember that," he said. "I gave him a verbal warning." – Let's take another look at that police scanner audio:

In the police audio, at 25min36sec, someone reads the license plate "722-ZHA"

At about 27min35sec, someone says "Connecticut trailer V87-278

At about 30min15sec, someone says "872-YEO possible suspect vehicle"

At about 30min40sec, someone says "Rodia: operator he's..{static}..as well. Name is Rodia, R-O-D-I-A, Christopher A. ...{static}..August 6th, '69"

I think the name Christopher Rodia is FAR more likely to have been given as a response to the "872-YEO possible suspect vehicle," rather than as a response to the "722" or the "V87" license plate. It came about 20 seconds after the "872" license plate was read on the air, and it seems clear that they are referring to a possible suspect. This article would have you believe that Rodia's name was read in reference to two plates that were given 2:30-5:00 minutes before. Much more investigation is needed into this issue by independent citizen journalists.

"his 72-year-old mother, Diane, is afraid to have her young grandchildren come to visit because of the threats. "We shouldn't have to be worrying about this," his mother said." – this is just hilarious to me, because the article tries to make this woman out to be a sweet old granny with visiting grandchildren, but in reality she is facing multiple felony charges along with Rodia!!

Notice how they are only referencing bloggers who don't "verify the information [they repost] from other sites to see if it's accurate."

"As for Rodia's pending criminal cases, he said they're related to a problem he had with pain killers, the result of taking medication for an injury he sustained about a year ago. He said he's been in drug counseling and has been "clean since July." – I think that is understating his arrest record quite a bit! The whole article seems to downplay and demean citizen journalism, while providing misleading information on the people in question.

One of the more intriguing bits of info is that a Greenwich detective says he remembers giving a verbal warning to a man around that time. If one is to do more digging into this area, I would suggest following up with that Detective to see if he was indeed referencing Chris Rodia. I wonder why a minor traffic violation, which only resulted in a verbal warning, showed up on the Sandy Hook police scanner..and why did this minor traffic violation involve calling in the plates to find out the operator of the vehicle? One would think that if Rodia was indeed meeting face-to-face with this officer, he should have had his license and registration on him. Calling in the plates to find out the operator of the vehicle would seem to indicate that said vehicle was unattended, and that there was no one available to provide registration information. This article only raises more questions, questions that need to be asked by citizens who feel obligated to discover the truth, because the mainstream media obviously isn't interested in digging deep.

MOTIVE

A law enforcement official said investigators had not found a suicide note or messages that spoke to the planning of such a deadly attack. Superintendent Robinson says there was no connection between Mr. Lanza's mother and the school, and the Washington Journal reported that "a former school board official in Newtown called into question earlier reports that Nancy Lanza had been connected to Sandy Hook Elementary School, possibly as part of the teaching staff. 'No one has heard of her,' said Lillian Bittman, who served on the local school board until 2011. 'Teachers don't know her.'"

But this contradicts accounts from authorities on December 14 that said she had worked there. CBS also confirmed Lanza's mother was a teacher there, and that many of the victims were her students. In this video, you will hear a reporter state that she spoke with the School Nurse who A) CONFIRMED that Nancy Lanza was a kindergarten teacher there, and B) that she locked eyes with the shooter! Notice how the story has changed in the 2nd video so that she does not actually "lock eyes," but only sees the boots of the shooter.

The Associated Press reported that "At least one parent said Lanza's mother was a substitute teacher there. But her name did not appear on a staff list. And the law enforcement official said investigators were unable to establish any connection so far between her and the school." However, the New York Times and the Washington Post both still claim she worked there as a kindergarten teacher. Adam Lanza (the accused shooter) is also said to have attended Sandy Hook, for a brief period, as a child. Either way, these are tenuous connections that link Adam Lanza to this school, leaving me to wonder why this scrawny kid would dress in combat gear, kill his mother, and drive to another state to randomly slaughter 20 first-graders. It's not adding up, and we are receiving no real answers from the media or authorities.

Tim Arnone told Reuters that he first met Lanza at Sandy Hook and attended Newtown High School with him, where the two were members of a technology club. He said Lanza was "driven hard" to succeed academically by his parents, particularly his mother. Authorities said Lanza had no criminal history, and it was not clear whether he had a job.

Former classmates remembered Adam Lanza as a brainy and quiet teen who sometimes wore a pocket protector. Joshua Milas, who graduated from Newtown High School in 2009, told The Associated Press that Adam Lanza was generally a happy person but that he hadn't seen him in a few years. "We would hang out, and he was a good kid. He was smart," Joshua Milas said. "He was probably one of the smartest kids I know." Catherine Urso, of Newtown, told the Associated Press her college-age son knew Lanza. "He just said he was very thin, very remote and was one of the Goths," she said.

Nancy Lanza and her husband, Peter Lanza, divorced in 2008, according to public records. Peter Lanza could not immediately be reached for comment but has spoken to police. Lanza's aunt, Marsha Lanza, of Crystal Lake, Ill., told the AP she was close with Adam Lanza's mother and sent her a Facebook message Friday morning asking how she was doing. Nancy Lanza never responded. Marsha Lanza described Nancy Lanza as a good mother and kind-hearted. She said her husband saw Adam Lanza as recently as June and recalled nothing out of the ordinary about him.

Investigators have no explanation for why Adam Lanza went to the school that morning. Lt. Vance said they are continuing to press for information, and had collected "some very good evidence." He also said that the one survivor of the killings, a woman who was shot and wounded at the school, would be "instrumental" in piecing together what had happened. Vance strangely added that people posting misinformation about the incident on social media websites would prosecuted for violations of Connecticut state and federal law. I'm not sure of the legalities of this claim, it sounds a bit odd to me.

WEAPONS

Law enforcement officials originally said the weapons used by the gunman were a Sig Sauer and a Glock. ABC and CBC both reported that "three guns were found: a Glock and a Sig Sauer, both pistols, inside the school, and a .223-calibre rifle in the back of a car." The day after the shooting, NBC claimed that FOUR handguns were found inside the school, not just two. A video also emerged of guns being found in a suspect vehicle, one is clearly a shotgun and there may be another firearm inside as well, I can't tell. This would make it very difficult for Lanza to have committed the murders with the rifle.

But the chief medical examiner Dr. Carver said in a press conference that it appeared all of the children had been killed by a "long rifle." Anonymous officials, NPR, and ABC News then contradicted themselves and said a Bushmaster .223-caliber rifle was found in the school and was used to commit the murders. The NY Times also says that a .223 Bushmaster semiautomatic was "found in the school."

One reasonable explanation for these conflicting reports is that the shotgun, which was found in the trunk, may have been confused with the rifle, which was found in the school. Another explanation would be that, if this was indeed a cover-up, the ones who manufactured this event were still getting their stories straight.

The CBC reported that "Authorities also recovered three other guns: a Henry repeating rifle, an Enfield rifle and a shotgun. It was not clear exactly where those weapons were found." I read one source which lists the repeating rifle and the Enfield rifle as being found in the Newtown home of Adam Lanza, with the Marlin rifle he used to kill his mother.

Sources told Fox News the guns used in the shooting were owned by and legally registered to Nancy Lanza. According to NPR, Federal agents have concluded that Adam Lanza visited an area shooting range, but they do not know whether he actually practiced shooting there. The ATF also determined that Lanza's mother visited shooting ranges several times, but it's still not clear whether she brought her son to the range or whether he ever fired a weapon there.

Nancy Lanza has since been painted as a "survivalist" who loved firearms, taught her sons how to shoot and was "stockpiling" because she was "worried about economic collapse." It's not difficult to see that efforts to portray Nancy Lanza as somehow responsible for this massacre also serves to rile the large contingent of gun owners in the country, particularly those who see a conspiracy on the government's part to "take back our guns." For now I just want to note that all of the Lanza family members seemed to live more or less normal middle-class lives. Yes, the parents were divorced, but it was apparently amicable and both put their own needs second to those of their children.

Despite "family insiders" claiming that he was a "deeply disturbed kid", Adam Lanza, like so many other alleged 'lone(r) gunmen' before him, does not fit the profile of a mass-murdering maniac. His 24-year-old brother, Ryan Lanza, said he hadn't seen his brother since 2010. This fact brings into question Ryan's claim that his younger brother may have had his identity card on his person at the school shooting. Although perhaps the question that needs to be asked here is, why would a person bother to carry identification with them after going to the trouble of dressing up in a bullet-proof vest, mask and black camouflage gear and going on a killing spree

VICTIMS, WITNESSES, AND FAMILY MEMBERS

The alleged father of one of the victims can be seen laughing and smiling right before a press conference. He takes a good 10 seconds in order to compose himself and get really serious. This does not look like a grieving father to me. I have been an actor for over 20 years and this looks like somebody getting into character.

This man, Gene Rosen, who gives several emotional on-camera testimonies to major news outlets, is registered with the Screen Actors Guild.

(show video)

He says in this video that his grandson is 8, while on his personal updated web profile, it says that his grandson is 2 years old:

(show video) <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MEdBdJedwBc>

Also, Mr.Rosen appears to have got a copy of the casualty list 2 DAYS before it was released to the public, as he states here:

The more i learn about this guy, the more fishy he seems. His personal profile also says he has a theater background, so I'm pretty sure he would be in the actors union too.

See video

Medical examiner Dr. Carver (interesting name for a guy who cuts up bodies) has some very peculiar things to say in this video.

(show video)

Even laughing at some points! I suppose someone who just examined 7 dead children might be a little weird, but this is a bit much. I checked him out and read an interview with him from years ago where he expresses extreme anti-gun views. He also recommended that Adam Lanza's DNA undergo genetic testing.

An important feature of the Sandy Hook event is the bizarre performance of Connecticut's top medical examiner H. Wayne Carver II at a December 15 press conference. Here's a little background on this guy: In early 2012, Carver threatened to vacate his position because of state budget cuts. In a famous criminal case, Carver "put a euthanized pig through a wood chipper so jurors could match striations on the bone fragments with the few ounces of evidence that prosecutors said were on the remains of the victim." He has also given at least one interview which highlights his extreme anti-gun views (I can't find the link to that article right now, but I will post it here if I can track it down).

One would expect Carver to be in his element while identifying and verifying the exact ways in which Sandy Hook's children and teachers were killed. Yet Carver appears apprehensive and uncertain during the December 15 press conference. Granted, he had just done autopsies on several small children, but I am shocked that he would laugh/smirk several times throughout this grave interview! I know he's a professional, but that does not seem very professional to me.

Photographic and video evidence is at once profuse yet lacking in terms of its capacity to demonstrate that a mass shooting took place on the scale described by authorities. For example, in an era of ubiquitous video surveillance, of public buildings especially, no visual evidence of Lanza's violent entry has emerged. And while studio snapshots of the Sandy Hook victims abound, there is little, if any, eyewitness testimony of the corpses except for Carver and his staff. Nor are there any routine eyewitness, photo, or video evidence of the crime scene's aftermath—broken glass, blasted security locks and doors, bullet casings and holes, damaged walls and floors—all of which are common in such investigations and reportage.

I am not saying that these people are definitely frauds, I do believe people were probably killed in this incident. It's just that some things about them seem a bit fishy to me.

Also, a memorial page for victim Victoria Soto was created on December 10, four days BEFORE the shooting.

See video here

And here is a picture of Viki Soto from the CNN website. If anybody can track down the warlock signing in the background of this photo, I'm sure he could tell you a bit about what really happened in Sandy Hook on December 14 2012.

Listed among the slain teachers/staff was school principal, 47-year-old Dawn Hochsprung, but Dawn apparently gave an interview to The Newtown Bee, and said that a masked man entered the school with a rifle and started shooting multiple shots, more than she could count, that went "on and on."!?!?

(show screenshot)

Oddly enough, medical personnel were forced to set up their operation, not at the school where the dead and injured lay, but rather at the fire station several hundred feet away. In light of this, who were the qualified medical practitioners pronounced the 20 children and 7 adults dead? Who decided that none could be revived? Why were the bodies left inside the school until at least 10pm?? Carver and his staff are apparently the only medical personnel to have attended to the victims—yet this was in the postmortem conducted several hours later. Such slipshod handling of the crime scene leaves the State of Connecticut open to a potential array of hefty civil claims by families of the slain. Carver says in his press conference that the families identified their children through photos, so it appears the parents themselves have not even seen the bodies of their children. Additionally, Sandy Hook Elementary is attended by 600 students, yet there is no photographic or video evidence of an evacuation on this scale. Instead, we have limited video and photographic imagery, showing only an evacuation of perhaps several dozen students.

Two other questions: Why is there is no video footage available of Adam Lanza, or the shooters, entering the school? Given that the principal had just installed a new security system, one would think that Lanza's forced entry would be caught on tape. And if the intent was to cause maximum carnage, why did the shooter wait until after the school was locked up tight? One would assume that if the shooter had arrived just a bit earlier, they would have had bustling hallways full of parents and children which they could victimize.

ODD MOVIE REFERENCES

There is a movie called "Sandy Hook Lingerie Party Massacre" (2000) filmed in Hoboken, NJ, same town where Ryan Lanza lived. You can see, in the movie poster to the left, that the movie villain is dressed in the same outfit as the alleged shooter. The plot involves a group of scantily clad women who are trapped by a hurricane (Sandy?) and killed one by one. I don't really know what to make of this odd coincidence, but I thought I should mention it. A review of this "movie" was written the same day of the 2012 mass shooting in Aurora Colorado: at the premiere of the Dark Knight Rising.

Speaking of Batman, it also turns out that the name "Sandy Hook" is referenced in the newest Batman film "The Dark Knight Rises" (TDKR). Now if you remember, on TDKR's opening night, there was a mass shooting in a theater, in Aurora, CO. So this movie already has ties to these types of events. At one point in the movie, the character "Gordon" is looking at a map of the fictional "Gotham City" where the movie takes place. He points to an area on the map where the villain will strike. This area, called "Sandy Hook" is the only legible name on the entire map. Again, I'm not sure what to make of this, so I'll leave it up to you to decide.

Also, I thought I should mention: There is an internet rumor, started by disinfo agent Sorcha Faal, that the fathers of both Adam Lanza and James Holmes (batman shooting) were set to testify in the recent LIBOR scandal. This is not verified in any way. While it's true both fathers are high-level professionals in the financial industry, we have no evidence that they are connected to LIBOR, however it is something worth investigating.

CONCLUSIONS

It is profoundly disturbing for anyone to consider 20 little kids being shot to death, just a couple of weeks before Christmas. Those 20 children were all undoubtedly in that state of anticipation that kids experience at the approach of the holidays, but now, their families have been destroyed. On December 19 the Connecticut State Police assigned individual personnel to each of the 26 families who lost a loved one at Sandy Hook Elementary. "The families have requested no press interviews," State Police assert on their behalf, "and we are asking that this request be honored. This gag order will be in effect until the investigation concludes, now forecast to be "several months away." With the exception of an unusual, and possibly contrived, appearance by Emilie Parker's alleged father, victims' family members have been almost wholly absent from public scrutiny.

I hope this video and the articles I've been writing about this event will help others to discover the truth of what happened that day. I have presented an overwhelming amount of evidence which shows there may have been two or more shooters that morning, and that Adam Lanza possibly did not even participate in these grisly murders.

The only thing I can think of which would explain all the "scrubbed" news articles, the second shooter reports, and the major inconsistencies in the official narratives, would be some kind of massive cover-up. But why? Could it be to disarm the American population right before the great economic collapse: the official transition of America from a first-world economy into the world's largest "free trade zone"?

If this was indeed a conspiracy/cover-up, then what motive would the conspirators have in committing this act of terror upon us? Let's explore some possible reasons:

Lohud.com has published an interactive map showing the names and locations of all the legal gun permit holders in Westchester and Rockland counties of New York. It is a public shaming campaign and there is no other way of looking at it. They have put pressure on NRA members by ridiculously claiming "they have blood on their hands" in reference to the Sandy Hook shootings and now they are publishing maps of individuals who have done nothing more than passed legal background checks and received a permit to legally purchase a hand gun in their counties. By the way, Lohud is owned by mega-corporation The Gannet Company, largest group owner of NBC-affiliated stations.

We also have The Economist calling for a gun ban stating "Tough police action, coupled with an extensive "buy-back" programme, would be needed to mop up the hundreds of millions of guns that are already held. If, as seems probable, this is held to conflict with the constitution, then the constitution needs to be amended." This publication belongs to The Economist Group, half of which is owned by Pearson PLC via Financial Times. A group of independent shareholders, including many members of the staff and the Rothschild banking family of England, owns the rest (via Wikipedia).

Students of history would do well to remember Operation Gladio, which attacked civilians, women and children, innocent people outside the political arena, for one simple reason: to force the Italian public to turn to the state, turn to the regime for greater security. The state created what they called "the strategy of tension."

And now we have had two more mass shootings since Sandy Hook, less than a month! This time by a guy who set the fire and waited for the first responders and then shot them. And another one, in Aurora Colorado no less! Again, the suspects are found dead on the scene. Consider the wide range of emotional connections these recent and unprecedented wave of mass casualty events have touched upon: almost as if they were meant to "bring this issue home" to as many people as possible:

July 20th 2012 – Aurora Massacre - James Egan Holmes (suspect) – theater

Aug 5th 2012 – Sikh Temple Massacre – Wade Michael Page – church

Sept 27th 2012 – Accent Signage Systems – Andrew J. Engeldinger – work place

Dec 11th 2012 – Clackamas Town Center – Jacob Tyler Roberts – mall

Dec 14th 2012 - Sandy Hook Massacre – Adam Lanza – school

Dec. 24th 2012 – Webster New York shooting – ? – first responders

Also keep in mind that eye witnesses report MULTIPLE shooters in many of these "lone gunman" attacks: the Batman/Aurora shooting, the Sikh Temple shooting, and now Sandy Hook.

Why do I think it's important to do your own research on this stuff? Well, Sheriff Pat Sullivan, who ran the Columbine investigation, was arrested last year and convicted of coercing sexual favors from a child in exchange for methamphetamine. His ridiculously short sentence, served in the jail that bears his name, amounted to a slap on the wrist. Rumor has it that Sullivan is part of a pedophile network along the lines of the Finders of Lost Children and the perpetrators of the Franklin Scandal child sex ring. I think if these are the types of idiots running mass murder investigations, then other concerned citizens need to take an interest in reporting what is really going on. As I've noticed in several of these recent mass shootings, the witnesses will report several shooters, but the media only tells us about a "lone nut" who committed the act.

I'm left wondering if this was actually the work of some highly trained professional hit team, or possibly a psy-op, using a carefully planned mission to terrorize people. This is combined with perception management, intrinsic to the mainstream media, which shapes the narrative and vectors the emotional fallout. Gun control isn't really the issue here. Control – period – is the issue. In effect, this is little different from what the U.S. government calls counter-insurgency or counter-terrorism in foreign countries, where it attacks innocent civilians to create the impression that they were killed by 'communists', 'terrorists', 'insurgents' or 'militants', with the aim of generating public support for the illusion that the common people need a strong, ruthless government to protect them from the 'evil-doers'. When the common people buy into manipulation, the end result is always the same.

I'm sorry but this Adam Lanza kid does not seem physically or mentally capable of this act, and I really believe it was a conspiracy by other individuals to use him as a patsy. I'm not saying Obama ordered this to happen or nothing, maybe it's just a weird cult of people living in Connecticut, but I think it's fairly obvious by now that there were several possible shooters involved in this event.
